

Thérèse thought to herself,

"These shall be my flowers of love, and I will scatter them by every glance and word that I give to others, and by doing all I can, even the littlest of things... in love."

